OUTSIDE

The property enjoys a hilltop setting and hence the name Bryn (Welsh for hilltop) it sits nestled to the fore of 23 acres of grass land and benefits from far reaching and most spectacular views to both the front and rear. The landscaped garden area has been carefully considered and planted to compliment the property but with minimal ongoing maintenance. The imposing gated entrance takes immediate advantage of the far reaching views to the rear of the property and over the dry stone natural dew pond. Local dry stone walling surrounds the whole property and with a frontage to the lane of 120 m. Block paving forms a sweeping driveway through the archway and to the stable block, courtyard and parking area. For the keen equestrian there is a well formed and landscaped 60m x 40m ménage and with field access to 23 acres of grass land and gallops.

The property sits amongst sweeping lawns bordered by trees and there are two large paved terraces to the rear with numerous well stocked shrubs and flower borders. There is a derelict old stone building that sits in the grounds of the property that could suit a variety of uses subject to the granting of planning consent.

The house and grounds look most spectacular in the evening with automated and timed illumination to the main gates, house, rear terraces, tennis court, pond and trees.

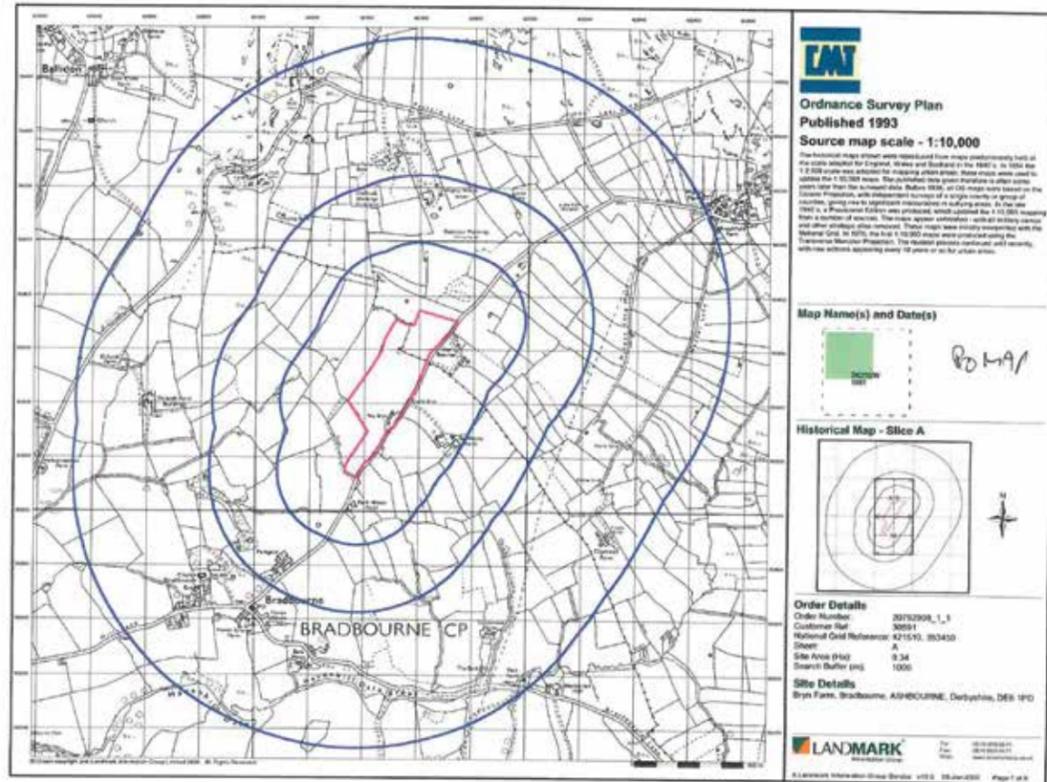

In addition, there is a full sized tennis court, with high specification playing surface and durable fencing and shooting rights to the 23 acres. Both ménage and tennis court benefit from the planting of over 600 trees and the formation of two delightful coppices that act as a wind break and minimise any visual impact.
